

Personas

Personas is a very important tool, but before read this article personas was a not very understanding for me. On our project we don't use personas correctly, that's probably because we don't understand of all the tool and we don't know the different perspectives that personas had. After the article I think that two of those perspectives can be useful for us and we project.

The engaging perspective is very useful but for use this perspective we need a lot of information of the Persona, the good point is that we have that information about the kids, this is to the Professor Rocio's investigations, and we can create a Persona with the engaging perspective and avoid prejudices just because our users are kids.

The scenarios is something important for our propject because we need to understand the kids perspective, and that can be a little difficulty. We make low useful personas and is very important make personas again with the steps suggested on the article and make more useful personas to help us create a child centered design so we can validate it.